KTI 30th Anniversary Open House and Rededication Ceremony

by Russ Bedell, Director of Public Relations

Congressman Tim Holden

“These students are our future, not only of the region and of Dauphin County, but of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.” With these words, US Congressman Tim Holden helped to celebrate the 30th Anniversary of our school at KTI’s Open House and Rededication Ceremony on Tuesday, June 8, 2010. Congressman Holden further echoed KTI’s philosophy of putting student success first by observing that KTI has “prepared your students for their career goals.”

front of the main entrance to commemorate the 30 years that our school has helped students to pursue their educational, career, and personal goals. The ceremony began with Mark Dykema, KTI’s Director of Admissions, welcoming everyone and introducing President and Owner David Snyder.

Mr. Snyder thanked everyone for coming out and gave a special recognition to his wife, Andrea Snyder (Vice President of KTI) and to his father, Kenneth Snyder (KTI’s Secretary/Treasurer), along with his mother. “I have very strong family ties and family beliefs, and it all begins with mom and dad. I know many of you are here because you want to make a better future for your children.” He finished his remarks with a heartfelt thanks to the students and graduates of Keystone Technical Institute.

Student Cynda Flynn

Following Mr. Snyder, Mr. Dykema gave two KTI students the opportunity to speak. Shelley Creager, our June 2010 Student of the Month talked first, followed by Cynda Flynn, the first student enrolled in our 30th anniversary year.

KTI’s importance to the local business community was also fully evident in the speeches of the special guests who spoke after Shelley and Cynda. Dauphin County’s Director of Community and Economic Development August “Skip” Memmi read a special proclamation from the Dauphin County Commissioners. David E. Black, the President and CEO of the Harrisburg Regional Chamber and Capital Region Economic Development Corporation followed with an inspirational speech about the impact of education.

Specialist*

Shelley was born in York County and raised in both Bridgeville and York County. She graduated from Red Lion Area High School and currently resides in York Township.

Before attending KTI, Shelley received her paralegal certification from York College. She was working as a Project Manager for a college textbook company when her office was closed in 2008. At this time she decided to change careers.

Shelley chose to enter the field of Dental Assisting because it seemed like an interesting, hands-on career. She realized that everyone needs dental care and this field is always growing and changing.

After Shelley graduates she plans on becoming a Dental Assistant in an office with lots of new and interesting services.

In her spare time, Shelley loves to read. Last year she became involved in all types of cookbooks and nutritional books. Some of her favorites include "Eat This Not That" and "Cook Yourself Thin."

education. Shelley had this to say about her time her at KTI, "It has been a fabulous learning experience. Next month I start my externship, which is very exciting. I can't wait to utilize my new skills."

Good Luck and Congratulations, Shelley!!

Pacific Institute Unit Eleven:

I'm Worth It!

Self-esteem is an estimate of our self-worth. Our appraisal of our own self-worth is very important. After all, if we don't believe that we are worthy of an education, a job, a good standard of living, no one else will believe it either.

When we have low self esteem we believe that anything is okay; that we are not worthy of achieving our dreams. For this reason we must build s e l f - e s t e e m . We need to be proactive and do this ourselves. We can't sit around and wait for others to applaud us.

The best way to build our self-esteem is to use our self-talk. We can do this by creating affirmations that will draw to us the things we deserve.

A side benefit is that by changing how we feel about ourselves, we become better people. We value others because we look good to ourselves and don't need to beat others down to feel better about ourselves.

*Our appraisal of our own self worth
is very important*

Staff Spotlight: Kenya Maul

Admissions Advisor

Kenya was born and raised in the South Bronx in New York. She moved to Scotch Plains, NJ when she was 21 years old with no idea of what she wanted to do with her life. She spent several years going from job to job, doing mostly administrative/clerical work. After searching for what she wanted to do with her life and an unfulfilling attempt at community college, she found her place at a technical school.

She loved the feeling of accomplishment and value she received from her school, majoring in skin care and make-up. For the first time in her life Kenya felt intelligent and accomplished, graduating with honors. The technical school offered her a personal setting, which was just what she was looking for. About technical schools, Kenya said, "Traditional school aren't for everyone but that doesn't mean you can't be successful. I'm living proof!"

After completing her coursework and working for 13 years at a spa, she decided she wanted to hone her artistry skills. Kenya went on to become a lead makeup artist for a cosmetic line. She also did make up for the performing arts at the Apollo in Harlem, New York as well as for many music videos.

Prior to coming to KTI, Kenya worked at a technical school in NJ for 2 years, finally finding her niche. She got married in May of 2009 and she and her husband decided to move back to his hometown of Harrisburg, PA. Kenya has been at Keystone Technical Institute for almost a year now.

When speaking about KTI Kenya said, "What I liked about KTI was that it's privately owned. There is a huge difference in a corporate owned and privately owned school. We actually care! I was offered jobs at other schools but what impressed me about KTI was the close knit family like environment. I've been here almost a year now and appreciate the opportunity to be a part of this family."

Business Etiquette You Should Know

From: Monster.com

What's the difference between the rising star whose career is picking up speed and his counterpart who can't seem to get the engine to turn over? Often, the star has mastered the nuances of business etiquette -- the subtle but critical behaviors that can make or break an important meeting, influence a first impression or impress a potential client.

The basics of professional etiquette are really quite simple. First, understand the difference between business etiquette and social etiquette. Business etiquette is genderless. For example, the traditional chivalrous etiquette of holding the door open for a woman is not necessary in the workplace and can even have the unintended effect of offending her. In the work environment, men and women are peers. Second, your guiding principle should always be to treat people with consideration and respect.

Here are some tips on how to have excellent business etiquette in your new professional environment:

Introductions: The proper way to make an introduction is to introduce a lower-ranking person to a higher-ranking person. For example, if your CEO is Mrs. Jones and you are introducing administrative assistant Jane Smith to her, the correct introduction would be "Mrs. Jones, I'd like you to meet Jane Smith." If you forget a person's name while making an introduction, don't panic. Proceed with the introduction with a statement such as, "I'm sorry, your name has just slipped my mind." Omitting an introduction is a bigger faux pas than salvaging a botched introduction.

Handshakes: A firm handshake made with direct eye contact sets the stage for a positive encounter. Women take note: To avoid any confusion during an introduction, always extend your hand when greeting someone. Remember, men and women are equals in the workplace.

Email: Remember that your email messages are an example of your professional correspondence. Professional correspondence does not include smiley faces or similar emoticons.

Faxes: Faxes should always include your contact information, date and number of pages included. They should not be sent unsolicited -- they waste the other person's paper and tie up the lines.

Cell Phones: Cell phones can be a lifesaver for many professionals. Unfortunately, if you are using a cell phone, you are most likely outside your office and may be preoccupied with driving, catching a flight or some other activity. Be sensitive to the fact that your listener may not be interested in a play-by-play of traffic or the other events you are experiencing during your call.

Gossip: It's practically impossible to avoid office gossip, but you don't have to take part in it. Indeed, becoming a participant is almost guaranteed to backfire on you. Listen to the office gossip if you must. Just be sure you don't generate any of it, especially when you're new on the job.

Manners: Always remember to use your manners. "Please, Thank you and You're Welcome" should be part of your everyday courtesy.

Even if you have impeccable social graces, you will inevitably have a professional blunder at some point. When this happens, follow this advice: Apologize sincerely without gushing. State your apology like you mean it, and then move on. Making too big an issue of your mistake only magnifies the damage and makes the recipient more uncomfortable.

Interview Questions of the Month

"Tell me about yourself."

This is usually the opening question in an interview and it's the perfect moment for you to toot your own horn -- not to tell your life history. Your answers should be a quick rundown of your qualifications and experience. Talk about your education, work history, recent career experience and future goals.

"Why did you leave your last job?"

This is your chance to talk about your experience and your career goals, not to badmouth a former boss or give a laundry list of reasons for your exit. Instead, focus on what you learned in your previous position and how you are ready to use those skills in a new position.

Ask the Computer Expert

By George Vujasin, Network Administrator

Dear Computer Expert,

I want to get a new computer with Windows 7, but there are so many different versions. To top it off, there are also 32-bit and 64-bit versions. Which is the best one to buy?

Confused

Dear Confused,

There used to be the day when you bought one operating system and that was that. Those days are long gone, and we as consumers have more choices. With those choices comes some confusion. This month, we will take a look at the various versions of Windows 7.

The first question I'll answer here is the difference between 32 and 64 bit software. The short answer to this question is a matter of the processor (CPU) that your computer is using. A 64 bit processor handles information differently than a 32 bit machine. If you are buying a new computer, this question will be answered for you. If you are looking to upgrade your machine, you must make sure you are buying the right version for your hardware, but that is a different column. The main thing to remember is that a 64 bit machine can run 32 bit software, but a 32 bit machine can NOT run 64 bit software.

Now, on to the version question. Windows 7 versions break down into two main subcategories; personal and business. There are currently six versions of Windows 7 available; Starter, Home Basic, Home Premium, Professional, Enterprise, and Ultimate. For the sake of this article, we will concentrate on the Home versions, since the Starter version is not available to the general public, and Professional, Enterprise, and Ultimate are primarily for business use. The main differences in the Home Basic and Home Premium versions are in how the systems handle the hardware, primarily how the software interacts with the processors. The other main difference is in how much Random Access Memory (RAM) can be used. The 64 bit version of Windows 7 Home Premium can use up to 16GB of RAM whereas the 32 bit version can only handle up to 4GB. The other main difference is in media management. Windows 7 Home Premium has DVD playback features, and the Windows Media Center built into the software itself; Home Basic would require additional software for DVD playback and media management.

The main thing to consider when buying a Windows 7 PC is buying the version that your budget will allow. This column only covers a few main points. A full comparison of Windows 7 versions can be found at :

Recipe of the Month: Linguine with Fresh Clam Sauce

Submitted by: Chef King

Ingredients:

1 dozen little neck clams (washed thoroughly)
1 tablespoon of minced garlic
2 tablespoons of minced onion
2 oz of olive oil
1 tablespoon of diced Italian parsley
1 teaspoon of chili pepper flakes
4 oz of water
2 oz of whole butter
8 oz of dry linguine
Salt and Pepper to taste
(Yield: 2 Portions)

Procedure:

1. In a sauté pan, add the clams and the water; cover with a lid and cook until the clams open. Allow the clams to cool, shuck from the shell, and save. Strain the liquid through a strainer and save. Discard the shells.
2. Take the clams and on a cutting board dice into a small dice. Save the liquid from the clams.
3. Heat 2 quarts of lightly salted water to boiling and cook the linguine al dente.
4. In a sauté pan, heat the olive oil and lightly brown the onion and garlic. Add the chopped clams, clam juice, chili pepper, and parsley and butter. Bring to a simmer and season to taste.
5. Serve immediately over the fresh cooked pasta.

You may add fresh grated parmesan if desired.
